EG Daily Brief: Iran oil revenue sustains shaky peace as Gulf pivots

送信者: EG Daily Brief 受信日時: 2026-07-06 21:50

【要点】

・イランは停戦期間中の石油輸出による70～80億ドルの収入を得られるため、交渉を引き延ばすという強い経済的インセンティブを持っており、基本シナリオは65%の確率で不安定な平和が続くと予想される。

・イランとの大規模軍事紛争が年末までに発生する確率は25%で、その場合は油価低下に伴い下半期のイスラエルによる攻撃が最も可能性が高い。

・湾岐協力会議諸国がイランとの関係改善にシフトし、米国への依存を減らしながら兵器供給やインフラを多様化させている。

・中国とEUは紛争解決期限を10月としたが、今後も貿易摩擦は拡大し、EUは段階的に新製品・新部門への関税拡大を進める可能性が高い。

・中国は報復的に敏感な産業への関税やサプライチェーン安全保障措置を講じ、レアアースミネラル流の再混乱も辞さない姿勢を示している。

【メール原文】

06 Jul 2026 08:42 EDT

Daily Brief: Iran oil revenue sustains shaky peace as Gulf pivots

Iran war update | China-EU trade | Ian Bremmer on globalization | Israel election | Iraq-US ties | Upcoming conference calls | EG in depth

summary

* Iran has strong financial incentives to drag out talks while Gulf states pivot toward a detente and away from US dependence.
* The China-EU trade confrontation will probably escalate despite a managed pause, as Brussels tightens policy and Beijing signals willingness to respond.
* Ian Bremmer outlines how the system underpinning globalization is shifting toward greater fragmentation.
* An opposition-led government in Israel would likely lower the near-term risk of major Israeli strikes on Iran.
* Regions, countries, and sectors covered in this edition include the US, Africa, Brazil, Canada, China, Cote d’Ivoire, D.R. Congo, the EU, Indonesia, Iraq, Israel, Mexico, South Africa, Venezuela, energy, geo-technology, mining, and trade.

the top line

Iran, MENA Crisis—Iran war & MENA regional update

* Analysts discussed how the basecase remains a shaky peace (a 65% probability) with a gradual reopening of the Strait of Hormuz. Iran has strong financial incentives—for example, $7 to $8 billion from its oil exports during the 60-day period ceasefire extension, depending on the oil price—to keep talks alive and drag them out.
* The overall odds of a return to major military conflict with Iran by year-end are 25%. Within that scenario, the most likely action is an Israeli strike in the second half of the year as oil prices fall.
* Gulf Cooperation Council states are pivoting toward detente with Iran, diversifying arms suppliers and infrastructure away from the strait while reducing their reliance on the US.
* Read more here . Reach out to discuss: mena@eurasiagroup.net .

China, EU—Trade confrontation will escalate despite managed pause

* A commitment from Brussels and Beijing to resolve economic tensions by October will probably delay, rather than avert, further clashes driven by China's export model and hardening EU trade and industrial policies to counter overcapacity.
* Building on planned local content requirements and restrictions on FDI and digital equipment, the EU will likely pursue continued, gradual expansion of tariffs to new products and sectors, though probably well short of broad-based US-style tariffs.
* China is clearly willing to escalate in response, likely with calibrated new tariffs on sensitive sectors, use of new supply chain security and related measures against EU firms, and possibly renewed disruption of rare earth minerals flows.
* Read more here . Reach out to discuss: china@eurasiagroup.net ; europe@eurasiagroup.net .

Ian Bremmer on globalization's discontents

Globalization is economically efficient and has driven the greatest period of largely uninterrupted growth and human development that we've ever seen. And yet, the system is shifting toward greater fragmentation. There are lots of reasons for that:

1. Geopolitical recession. A period of misalignment between the international rules and the underlying balance of power creates problems for business models predicated on international cooperation and, accordingly, globalization.
2. Domestic politics. Globalization doesn't mean more wealth for everyone… political leaders find the working and middle classes want subsidies, industrial policy, and protectionism.
3. Changing role of labor. Access to inexpensive labor has been one of the biggest drivers of globalization… advances in industrial automation and robotics are reducing its relevance.

4. National security. Advanced AI models are becoming too strategically important for governments to share or cede control⋯ an AI arms race between the Americans and the Chinese represents a core challenge.

For more of Ian's insights on Iran, Latin America, and the Supreme Court, read this week's EG Update .

Israel—Likely opposition win would diminish threat of Israeli strikes on Iran

* With Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's Likud and allied parties polling short of a governing majority, the anti-Netanyahu bloc remains favored to win October's elections despite its divisions (60% probability, down from 65% in April).
* Netanyahu has a 40% overall chance of staying in power (up from 35%), with his best route being an opposition failure to form a majority government, although he retains a narrow path to forming a new majority coalition.
* An opposition-led government would likely lower the near-term risk of major Israeli strikes on Iran, as a new prime minister seeking to build goodwill with Washington would act with greater caution than Netanyahu.
* Read more here . Reach out to discuss: mena@eurasiagroup.net .

Iraq—Iraq gives Trump what he wants on militias and oil, for now

* Prime Minister Ali Zaidi's expected July visit to Washington and a high-profile package of pledges to President Donald Trump will ease bilateral tensions and reduce near-term US sanctions risk, even though most commitments will be only partially implemented.
* The disarmament and integration of Shia militias will deliver visible institutional changes, but de facto power will remain fragmented, with Iran-aligned factions and pro-IRGC militias retaining coercive capacity outside formal structures.
* The Strait of Hormuz's reopening averts a fiscal crisis and social unrest in the near term, but Iraq's structural vulnerabilities—overdependence on oil, an outsized public wage bill, and reliance on Iranian gas—will persist.
* Read more here . Reach out to discuss: mena@eurasiagroup.net .

Upcoming conference calls

* 6 July 8:30 AM ET—Brazil update. Register here .
* 7 July 11:00 AM ET—Colombia's fiscal outlook: A conversation with Juan Sebastian Betancur, technical director of the Autonomous Fiscal Rule Committee. Register here .
* 9 July 9:00 PM ET—On the ground in China: Assessing the reset of China-US relations and rising China-EU and China-Japan tensions. Register here .

eg in depth

Venezuela—Conference call notes: Venezuela’s earthquake fallout: The earthquakes are a significant setback for Venezuela's economic recovery, likely weakening President Delcy Rodriguez and slowing US-backed reforms, but not reversing the broader opening or normalization process. Trump’s administration remains committed to political stability under Rodriguez, but social pressures and an eventual Maria Corina Machado return could prompt a recalibration of transition conditions or timing. The disaster may legitimize a more aggressive stance toward creditors in a forthcoming debt restructuring, with a lengthy process that involves the IMF still likely, though the US could use its leverage to force a faster resolution. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: latinamerica@eurasiagroup.net .

EU—Competitiveness scorecard: Q2 update shows a further uptick in the score to the highest level yet, reflecting moderate progress overall. This reflects political alignment across the EU’s major member states (“E6”) on common priorities. Scope for meaningful legislative progress over the next 6-12 months before the 2027 election “super-cycle” closes the window for reform. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: europe@eurasiagroup.net .

China—Coal-to-chemicals and green molecules poised for more Chinese policy support: In the aftermath of the Iran crisis, two of the clearest beneficiaries of Chinese energy policy support will be coal-to-chemicals and green molecules, including hydrogen, ammonia, and methanol. Beijing will probably draw a central lesson from the Iran crisis: China should accelerate import substitution across the energy system. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: ecr@eurasiagroup.net .

US—Trump's personal earnings will make ethics a top issue for 2028: In a recently-released financial disclosure Trump reported at least $2.2 billion in revenue in 2025, much of it from his family's cryptocurrency venture, World Liberty Financial. The figure will headline Democratic attacks going into the midterms and beyond. The party has already built much of its messaging around corruption in the Trump administration. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: unitedstates@eurasiagroup.net .

US—Republicans would replace Alito and Thomas quickly if they retire: Though NPR retracted its story last week reporting the retirement of Supreme Court Justice Samuel Alito, there is still a significant possibility Alito or his colleague Clarence Thomas retires this year. Both are well into their 70s, and if Democrats win the Senate this year, this could be Republicans’ last chance to replace the conservatives for years. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: unitedstates@eurasiagroup.net .

South Africa—Anti-migrant protests will remain a prominent issue through November's elections: March and March leaders have framed the 30 June deadline as the start of a sustained pressure campaign, reportedly vowing weekly protests for six months. Opposition parties will also have incentives to keep the issue alive ahead of the November local elections. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: africa@eurasiagroup.net .

D.R. Congo—Fiscal risks will persist despite progress toward IMF milestones: Despite strong mining exports, higher revenue collection, and a successful first Eurobond issuance, fiscal pressures remain elevated. The fallout from the Iran war, the Ebola outbreak, the persistent conflict in eastern DRC, and rising political tensions will likely continue to strain public finances. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: africa@eurasiagroup.net .

Cote d'Ivoire—Low risk of debt distress reclassification will support implementation of development plan: The authorities have strengthened debt sustainability. Cote d'Ivoire moved from a moderate to a low risk of debt distress after the public debt ratio fell for the first time in more than a decade, reaching 57.1% of GDP in 2025. The IMF reclassification makes Cote d'Ivoire the only country in sub-Saharan Africa in the low-risk category. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: africa@eurasiagroup.net .

Indonesia—Prabowo likely to cut spending on flagship free meals program: President Prabowo Subianto will likely approve a proposed additional $2.2 billion cut to his signature free meals program. While the reduction is modest and the full allocation was unlikely to be spent, the move will reinforce signs that Prabowo is trying to keep the budget deficit within the 3%-of-GDP limit. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: southeastasia@eurasiagroup.net .

US, Canada, Mexico—Conference call notes: USMCA update: Analysts discussed the US-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) review will most likely result in a "zombie" agreement, with bilateral protocols instead of a full trilateral renewal. Mexico remains better positioned than Canada to reach an agreement this year. The negotiations will focus on tightening North American supply chains by raising regional content requirements and restricting Chinese participation, particularly in autos and strategic manufacturing. Trade and security will remain on separate tracks, allowing USMCA talks to advance despite continued bilateral tensions, especially between the US and Mexico. Still, the likelihood of Trump linking the two issues remains an important tail risk. Read more here . Reach out to discuss: unitedstates@eurasiagroup.net .

Upcoming Events:

* 6 July: Data: US ISM services index, US S&P Global services PMI. Events: The ASEAN+3 Bond Market Forum is held in Japan through 10 July; Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi meets Norway's Prime Minister Jonas Gahr Store in Oslo.
* 7 July: Data: China foreign reserves, France trade, Germany industrial production, Japan leading index and labor cash earnings, US trade balance. Events: US Trade Representative Jamieson Greer holds a hearing on proposed measures related to forced-labor import enforcement; France's Court of Appeal will rule on Marine Le Pen's challenge to a ban on running for public office, imposed after her conviction over the misuse of European Parliament funds; SpaceX is added to the Nasdaq-100 Index, weeks after its IPO.
* 7-8 July: Events: NATO summit in Turkey.
* 8 July: Data: Chile CPI, Japan BoP current account balance, US wholesale inventories and mortgage applications. Central banks: US FOMC minutes.
* 9 July: Data: China PPI and CPI, Japan money stock, US initial jobless claims and existing home sales. Events: New York Fed President John Williams, Dallas Fed President Lorie Logan, and BOE Deputy Governor Sarah Breeden speak at the Future of Market Liquidity and Functioning workshop in New York; the ECB publishes an account of its June meeting.

* 10 July: Data: Canada building permits, France CPI, Germany CPI, Japan PPI.

The EG Daily Brief is compiled by Jens Larsen, Lucy Eve, Babak Minovi, Pietro Guglielmi, Rahul Bhatia, Marilia Sirio, Joseph Craven, Martina Silva, Sol Lopes, and Trista Kelley, with help from Marina Tavares, and Astral Betteridge.

closing quip

Who needs Democrats when you have your own party derailing the Trump agenda?"—Rep. Nicole Malliotakis (R-NY), quoted in Politico on 1 July, on the recent turmoil in the House that has in effect seen House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) lose control of the floor.

Explanation of Political Trajectories (ie, "Trajectories")

Eurasia Group's (EG) Political Trajectories are indicators of the net impact of political factors on the macro business environment in a country over specific timeframes. For each country, two Trajectories are provided, a short-term (6 months) and a long term assessment (24 months). Trajectories are assigned by Eurasia Group's country analysts through a structured qualitative process. Each Trajectory represents a net assessment, indicating how political changes in a country impact the macro business environment, defined as the economic and investment climate in the country. Once initiated, Trajectories are updated both periodically and as events warrant. Trajectories may be suspended from time to time if there is no active analyst opinion or analyst coverage, but the opinion or coverage is expected to resume. Trajectories can be:

Positive: Political factors in the country are anticipated to have a positive impact on the macro business environment

Neutral: Political factors in the country are anticipated to have a neutral or negligible impact on the macro business environment

Negative: Political factors in the country are anticipated to have a negative impact on the macro business environment

Disclaimers: Trajectories are solely for informational purposes and should not be relied upon as investment advice. Trajectories do not indicate asset price movements, and have no value in forecasting market prices. Trajectories are based on data and analysis we deem to be reliable; they are not guaranteed as to accuracy or completeness. The Trajectories indicate the political outlook in a single country, over time. Trajectories do not address sector-specific or city/regional political risks that are often different than the country-level outlook. Trajectories represent an analyst's net qualitative assessment of a country's political outlook. EG sales, analytic staff and products may provide analysis reflecting different opinions than those expressed by the Trajectories.