【要点】

- ・欧州人民党（EPP）の国家代表団は、産業加速化法における製造業目標と地元産業要件の厳格さについて意見が分かれている。ベルギー、オランダ、ドイツなど6カ国は、GDP比20%の製造業目標を拘束力のあるものにすべきではないと主張している。
- ・欧州議会の3人の主要報告者（いずれもEPP所属ではない）は、厳格な地元産業要件と公的資金を27加盟国製造製品に限定する提案をまとめた。
- ・EUの産業復興を目指すフォン・デア・ライエン委員長の産業政策の柱である本規制案について、議会と理事会の見方が相違している。
- ・EPP代表団は英国やEEA諸国などの取引パートナーを「欧州製」カテゴリーに含め、EU相当のステータスを付与することを望んでいる。
- ・スペインとイタリアはより厳格な「欧州製」要件の導入を支持しており、加盟国は国単位ではなく製品ベースの「欧州購入」要件を好む傾向が見られている。

BRUSSELS — National delegations from the European People's Party are divided over how far the Industrial Accelerator Act should go in setting manufacturing targets or strict local content requirements, according to contributions from 12 member states obtained by POLITICO .

Delegates from Belgium, the Netherlands, Germany, Luxembourg, Sweden and Slovenia are the most skeptical, saying the Commission's ambition for manufacturing to make up 20 percent of the EU's GDP should not be a binding target.

The center-right group's broader input comes a day after a report by the three lead MEPs, or rapporteurs, on the IAA called for strict local-content requirements , with public funding reserved for products and components made in the 27 member states.

Notably, none of the rapporteurs is from the EPP, the largest group in the Parliament. Socialist Pierre Jouvet, Renew's Christophe Grudler and the Greens' Anna Cavazzini were tasked by the European Parliament's internal market, industry and trade committees with drafting the joint report on the IAA proposal launched by the Commission in the spring.

The proposed regulation, a pillar of Commission President Ursula von der Leyen's industrial agenda, aims to harness public procurement of green and energy-intensive technology to power a broader European economic revival. But the views of the Parliament and Council of the EU are diverging, heralding a tough autumn battle over the bill.

The EPP's national delegations want trading partners and close allies like the U.K. and European Economic Area countries to be included in the "Made in Europe" club of countries that have free-trade and procurement deals with the bloc and would gain EU-equivalent status.

The delegations from Spain and Italy are the most in favor of stricter Made in Europe requirements that apply on an industry-by-industry basis. Spain, for example, wants countries to be opted in on a product-by-product basis.

The views of the national delegations are more closely aligned with those of the member states, which favor a product-based approach to "Buy European" requirements rather than a country-by-country opt-in or opt-out system.
