Sector Coverage

Beijing's exit rules tighten talent mobility

By EG China, Dan Wang, Mingda Qiu, et al.

China's new exit-entry rules codify previously informal controls into a permanent legal framework that makes cross-border talent mobility an explicit instrument of supply-chain security.

Managed decoupling will define US-China relations through 2031

By EG China, Gerard DiPippo, Amanda Hsiao, et al.

US-China managed decoupling is the basecase through 2031 (60%): restrictions will grow but mutual chokepoint exposure deters severe escalation. A post-Trump administration, AI developments, and Taiwan are the key wildcards, with escalation more likely than a pragmatic thaw.

Trade war likely to continue through US midterms

By EG Canada, Graeme Thompson, Clayton Allen, et al.

The US-Canada trade war is likely to endure through the US midterm elections, as political constraints will make it difficult to roll back retaliatory tariffs and resume negotiations.

White House digital probe will target EU exports not firms

By EG Geo-technology, Nancy Wei, Nick Reiners, et al.

Trump's Section 301 probe into EU digital rules likely mirrors his first term: tariffs on select EU exports, not firms. US sees the 15% Turnberry cap as a soft ceiling, not a cap. Months-long investigation allows talks, but EU may suspend Turnberry and retaliate if US breach 15%.
